From sunset until sunrise a light will be swang from each of the schooners. The reason given by captains of vessels, chartered and owned by the United States Quarterwaster Department, for archering in the Petomac river at night, was, that they feared that they would run their vessels aground if they attempted to run past the shoals after dark. The lamps placed on the schooners will give a light sufficiently streng to enable all pilots to pass up and down the river with safety, provided they govern themselves by the charts provided by United States Coast Survey.

From and after this date, no vessel propelled by steam will be allowed to anchor, excepting in such weather as by running the loss of the vessel or cargo might be endangered.

LOCAL NEWS.

MEETING AT PARKER'S HALL-A Call that was not Responded to .- There was a meeting at Parker's Hall last night in answer to the following call published in the Constitutional Union:

"Give us back our old Commander ! - The Soldiers of the Army and Sailors of the Navy, whether discharged or in the service, wounded or sick in the hospitals, who are in favor of the election of General George B. McClellan, the hero of Antietam and humane Commander of the Army of the Potomac, are requested to meet at the Hall of the National Democratic Association, Pennsylvania avenue, near Sixth street, on Wednesday evening, September 14, to determine such action as may be proper to secure effective action in the Presidential campaign."

This call was answered by the soldiers and sailors to whom it was addressed, to the number of four, two soldiers and two sailors. The Association was present, however, in very good force, and the exercises went on despite the disappointment as to the attendance of the guests especially invited.

Mr. John Purdy presided, and Mr. William

Flinn acted as Secretary.
Marcus Duvall, Thomas Grady, and John W. Bell were proposed and elected members. Justice Clayton read extracts from a letter which he announced was from a gentleman who was formerly a colonel and had served under Gen. McClellan. The writer felt sure there was a strong McClellan feeling among the soldiers, and the majority were against this Administration, "who, like vultures, were growing sick on the carcasses of the soldiers." Justice Clayton then said that, in the absence of another speaker, he would say a few words. He understood some one had said it was Clayton first and Florence next one night, and vice versa the next night.

Clayton .- "Well, the Star is good author-Florence (advancing to the stand)-"If you will allow me a moment"— Clayton.-"Oh, now, you commenced the other night; it's my turn to-night." Mr. Florence said he simply desired to state that this meeting was called especially for the sailors and soldiers. He had had conversation with many of both arms of the serviceofficers and privates-who were with the association, but feared to own the fact openly. A few days ago (said Mr. F.) a vote was taken in a company near the city, and that all to a man voted for McClellan, and the result has been that they have been put on double duty ever since. So it would be with any who would attend these meetings. They would be put upon double duty. But the speaker was sat-isfied McClellan would be elected and would be our next President. [Applause.] Justice Clayton here pronounced Mr. Tom Florence "a brick," and proceeded to make a speech upon the finances. He argued that the party in power had driven gold and silver out of use, and given the people nothing but shin-plasters. Gold it was said had gone up as high as 291 on one day. This is a faliacy. Gold never rises or falls. It is intrinsically always the same thing. It is not true that gold has risen or fallen; but the currency of the government has depreciated; and the depreciation was owing to a want of confidence in the government. The depreciation is not, that the government is not able to meet demands upon it; for it is; the present debt was merely a drop in the bucket for this great country; but it was because of a want of confidence in the administration. The fear is that under present management the government will be overthrown. There is no telling what raid Lee may next make and then gold will run up again. As soon as McClellan was nominated gold fell. Why! Does he control it! No! but it was the magic in his name; (applause) it is the confidence in him, that he will us back a

Mr. Tom Florence .- "The Star said so."

to it. (Renewed applause.)

Mr. Schmidt said his frent Glayton had made a goot speech, unt when a person shpeaks of money, it remints him he has a duty to perform. He would state that he had received in the aggregate $556.70 toward the celebration fund.
Hon. S. E. Ancona, of Pa, who Mr. Florence announced was here for the purpose of franking Democratic documents, was called upon for a speech. He said that it was a well known fact in politics that as Pennsylvania goes in October so she will go in November, and as plause.) While he had no doubt what the home vote would be, he had some anxiety as to the vote of the army. He therefore urged all to go to work earnestly. Visit the hospitals and seek out all entitled to a vote, and urge upon them the necessity of casting a Democratic vote. [Applause.] Place before these solider's McClellan's letter of acceptance, and that will be platform enough for all of them, and there is no question where they will cast their ballot if permitted to vote according to their own convictions. The speaker claimed that there was no achieve manning the Democracy of Pennsylvania. They all accepted McClellan, and to a man would vote for him. [Applause.] Capt. W. J. Geary was now called to the stand. He said he had many friends appeal to him, as to whether he was going to work with a party he had formerly lought against. He (Geary) replied no; but he was going to work with a party he had formerly lought against. He had fought eleven battles; and a man who, if elected, would be President, and not a cheeker of Treasury notes. [Applause.] He (Mr. G.) acknowledged that at one time he had called the Democrate copperheads, but the Republican roosters had stolen his thunder. [Applause and laughter.] After the Mexican war, he (the the speaker) met Abraham Lincoln and W. P. Mangum on the avenue, and they shook hands with each other, and offered each other congration what they considered a triumph of the conservative principles of the Whig party. He fought them against the Democratic day of the Harbor Master shall received remember of the conservative principles of the Whig party. He fought them against the Democratic oparty. Had fought them since he was 21, and he believed before he was born he had done so; liaughter; but he new came to the party and he believed before he was born he had done so; liaughter; but he new came to the party and he believed before he was born he had done so; liaughter; but he new came to the party and he believed before he was born he had done so; liaughter; but he new came to the party and he believed before he was born he had done so; liaughter; but he new came to the party and he had be party and he believed before he was born he had done so; liaughter; but out all entitled to a vote, and urge upon them the necessity of casting a Democratic vote. [Applause.] Place before these soldier's McClellan's letter of acceptance, and that will be platform enough for all of them, and there metallic currency, or make our paper equal he (Geary) wanted the first dig at him, [ap-plause,] and he would commence now. He and the District Attorney were both Whigs, and the speaker introduced the District Attorney at a barbacue near Bladensburg. Time rolled around, and they became Know Nothings. [The speaker here turned to Justice Clayton and remarked, " Doctor, you and I were both also of that breed of pups."] [Great laughter.] When he first came here his friend Ned was a Whig. Well, the Whig party did not win much, and his friend did not know what to do. The speaker advised him to stick to the party. His friend, the District Attorney, replied, "Bill, I am afraid it's a losing busi-ness." Well, his friend stuck up his shingle as a lawyer, and like his (the speaker's) other was no copperhead, but was against any party that attempted to deprive him of his righte as an American citizen. [Applause.]

If he had a voice that could be heard at the White House, he would tell Mr. Lincoln that the Democrats are coming, and will make him quake in his boots. [Applause.] The speaker here charged that by the division of the State of Virginia, this administration had justified and become advocates of secession. [Applause.]

[At this point some one in the back hall attered an expression which sounded very like "You're a liar." It created some little commotion, and cries of "put him out," were uttered, but the excitement was allayed by the announcement that it was a drunken man who had attempted to say "louder, louder." The speaker continued, and said if any one in office here dared to call him a Copperhead he would tell him flatly he was a liar. [Applause.] The speaker said he had that day met the District Attorney, and he understood from him that he (the D. A.)

was going to make a speech at Union League Hall to-night, and pitch into the speaker. Well, friend, Wharton, he got about one case each court, and that was always a case that did not pay. [Laughter] Well, the Know Nothing party came up, and the speaker was applied to, and some one said, (the speaker pointed sig-nificantly at Dr. Clayton, which act created renewed laughter,) do you want to become a member of the consecrated order. [Laughter.] I said "I do," and I was taken in, and was asked to put my hand on a cross and swear. I could not do that, but when a magistrate was called I swore. Well, my friend Ned was there. You remember it, Docter, (to Clayton.) Judge Clayton here got up from his seat, and some one called out, "Don'trun away, Judge."

The latter replied philosophically that he enly wanted a drink of water, and atter imbibing, he again sat down, amid much merriment. The speaker continued by saying that when he joined the K. N. Lodge, he knew nothing about it, but he soon took all the degrees, and Carrington and Clayton took as many degrees as he did. [Laughter and applause.] Then the Union party came up and met where Canterbury now is, and I went there, and the first man I saw was my friend, the District Attorney, and he was speaking against the Dem Jacks, and Lum Cooper beat him at that game. [Laughter.] Walter Lenox, too, always gave his (the speaker's) friend a hard rub also. Mr. Geary said he hoped McClellan would be elected, so that he could open the Bastile and let Lenox out, for a better man or a purer patriot never lived. [Applause.] The District Attorney then went to the Bell and Everett party, and Judge, you were there too, (to Clay-ton, causing laughter,) and thence to the wigwam. Then came the division of plunder, and the District Attorney got his share. [Applause.]

.Capt. G. concluded by remarking that he expected the District Attorney would pitch into him, and, if he did, all he asked was the use of this hall on the succeeding night for a reply. When Mr. Carrington said the other night that McClellan, by accepting the nomination, in-sulted the living and the dead, he knew he was a liar. [Applause.] McClellan did not insult any one but the pheasant tail roosters who are trying to break up the Government, and such men as Sumner, Wilson & Co. | Ap-Three cheers were then given for McClellan
